

April 23, 2020

Upon deletion of a user account by the customer, Google will erase, destroy, permanently delete, and render unreadable all customer data related to such account in its systems, servers, and physical data centers as soon as is reasonably practicable, and within a maximum period of 180 days. More information about Google's data deletion policy can be found in Google's G Suite Data Processing and Security Terms. Customer data includes "Personally Identifiable Information", which means any information within an MCPS account that may be reasonably used to identify a former student enrolled in an MCPS K-12 school.

Kevin Kells

Kevin Kells
Global Director, Google for Education